

Election Law

The firm's senior partners have been widely recognized as the architects of modern election law.

Holtzman Vogel's Election Law Group is known across the United States as the preeminent firm for election law. Our attorneys have decades of experience representing presidential campaigns, elected officeholders, political committees, consultants, donors, and issue advocacy groups.

The firm's senior partners have been widely recognized as the architects of modern election law. Our attorneys have served as Federal Election Commissioners, prosecutors, state lawmakers, and the leaders of the election law practices at the country's biggest firms--growing our group to be the largest consolidation of senior election law talent at any firm. Many of our partners designed and executed the legal structure in place in Washington today and they continue to invent new strategies for clients to succeed at the federal level and in all fifty states.

Our Election Law attorneys provide clients in-depth advice on the administration of federal, state, and local elections. Our clients are:

- Elected officials
- Candidates and candidate committees
- Organizations engaging in voter registration and get out the vote efforts
- Political parties
- Federal and state elections officials
- Legislative bodies and committees

We advise clients participating in elections as a candidate, administrator, voter, donor, or advocate, and our attorneys ensure their proper legal positioning in every phase of the process. We advise clients on the full range of legal issues including:

- Voting rights
- Ballot access
- Voter registration efforts and related issues
- Election day operations
- Canvass of ballots
- Post-election recounts and contests
- Run-off elections
